Hormone conditions are diagnosed and managed on blood tests, which can feel baffling. These questions help you understand what was found and what happens next, with room to write the answers down.

THE DIAGNOSIS AND THE TESTS

What exactly is the condition, and what did the blood tests show that points to it?

MY NOTES

THE TREATMENT

What is the medicine, what does it do, and what should I see as it starts to work? Are there any side effects or warning signs to watch for?

MONITORING AND LIFE AHEAD

How often will we recheck, and what tests? What should I track at home (drinking, weight, energy, appetite)? What does a well-controlled pet look like, and what is the long-term outlook?

WORTH KNOWING

Most hormone conditions are very manageable once the dose is dialled in, and many pets live a full, normal life. The early weeks of testing and tweaking are the busy part; it settles.
